Subject: RE: Indiana Civil and Criminal Jury Instructions

Hello Mr. Bavitz –

I wanted to confirm that our client's Annotated Jury Instructions (release dates 2017, 2018, 2019, and 2021) have recently been made available, at no charge, through the IN Supreme Court Library's "Lexis Digital Catalog." Any member of the public can now ultimately gain access to Lexis's digital version, or visit the library in person and review the hard copy of the Lexis publication.

For online access, the annotated civil and criminal instructions are available via the following link. Upon following that link you may receive the following auto-response – Thank you for your request. You should receive details within two to three business days, and we have sent a confirmation to the email you provided. The 2-3 day response below is just an auto-response – you should receive the instructions much sooner than that.

Currently, the UNANNOTATED jury instructions are not available through the IN Supreme Ct Library (in digital or hard copy format), but we're told they have future plans to make them so.

I assume this addresses your organization's concerns in that PRO's request has been fulfilled as the IJA jury instructions are no longer maintained behind a pay wall. We are considering this matter resolved. Thank you.
